

FOREWORD

Nachtlieder for Clarinet and Piano has been among my favorite pieces since recording it for ALBA (ABCD 126) in the early 1990s. Salonen's colorful use of dynamic contrasts and varied tempos and moods such the "Swing Tempo" section in movement III suggested to me an alternate instrumentation compared to the clarinet and piano original. In this second version I have retained the solo line of the clarinet but exchanged for the piano instruments that, in the case of the tenor saxophone, vibraphone, double bass (pizzicato) and snare drum with brushes, would impart a "cool jazz" feel. Use of the flute is associated with this aesthetic and additionally allows for "breathy" low notes and crystalline high notes that interlock with crotale. The single percussionist further expands the color palette with sizzle cymbal, suspended cymbal and concert bass drum. Indeed the importance of the percussion is underscored by it having the final melodic gesture in the last movement. One each of violin, viola, cello and contrabass provide continuity throughout the entire work while drawing upon their inherent timbral flexibility.
